SAN DIEGO RIVER NORTH BOUNDARY

EDGAR F. HASTINGS
SUPERVISOR FIRST DISTRICT

Ocean Beach and Point Loma Should Be United For Hastings

Edgar F. Hastings, supervisor of the first district has been a resident of Point Loma since 1909. He has been active in and sponsored many of the improvements on Point Loma and the beach district during the past 27 years. Among these accomplishments are the paving of Canyon road and Catalina St., and the Military road on top of Point Loma to the old lighthouse. Aided the W. Pt. Loma blvd., project and many others. While on the City Board of Education, was responsible for the building of the Point Loma high school, the first unit to the new Ocean Beach school, and recently assisted the committees who were responsible for getting the new Ocean Beach school, also the new bus service on Voltaire St., to high school.

The Mission Beach school and the large new additions to the La Jolla high and grammar schools are the result of his activities. He also worked with the committee who succeeded in the improvements and additions on the Point Loma high school and Loma Portal school.

Hastings sponsored the clean-up and tree planting program in the beach districts several years ago when the work program was under the Welfare Dept.

Supervisor Hastings assisted the original committee to make Mission Bay a state park.

He assisted in the making of the Cabrillo monument and old lighthouse a National Park and the Bennington cemetery a National cemetery.

There is hardly an improvement in this area that he has not been identified in, as a citizen or a public official.

Certainly he has demonstrated his ability and willingness to assist this district.

WHITE SHRINE OF SAN DIEGO GUESTS HERE

Mrs. George Dameron of Alligator Rock lodge was hostess Wednesday afternoon to the White Shrine Social club of San Diego, at a pot-luck luncheon and bridge in the patio of her summer home here.

Thirty-one members were present and three visitors, Mesdames Duane Stafford, R. L. Palmer and Florence Dameron of El Centro.

High score in bridge went to Mrs. Charles Young and Mrs. Hervey Whitehead.

COLOR LINE AN ISSUE AT SOME BEACHES

The city manager and the council are confronted with the issue of drawing the color line at the beaches. Tourists from other places are complaining that members of the colored race are permitted to use the bathing beach in communing with whites, particularly at La Jolla. A letter from a Pasadena visitor to the council deprecates the presence of Negro bathers at La Jolla, stating that if the practice was permitted many wealthy visitors from the east who come to La Jolla would go elsewhere, as it is not allowed at other beaches. At the city hall, it was stated today that perhaps this was the first time that the color line was raised as an issue at local beaches. Impression was given by councilmen that perhaps there is nothing they can do about it.—Tribune.

KIWANIANS HAVE FEAST OF MONTANA TROUT

A few weeks ago when J. Watson of the Voltaire street MacMarr store returned from his vacation he promised Kiwanis brothers a feed of Montana trout, but most of us took the information as only another fish story. Wednesday Jake kept his promise and each Kiwanian had all he could eat of the tasty dish, done to a rich brown, by ladies of the Woman's club.

Dr. Felt presided at the meeting with Harry Herz as chairman of the day. Milt Lancaster gave a biography of Harry's life which was an interesting highlight.

The speaker of the day was Capt. Thomas Rynning of Ocean Beach, deputy U.S. Marshal for San Diego, who gave a most interesting bit of early history of the Arizona, Texas and New Mexico country. Capt. Rynning was introduced as an old timer and true pioneer of the west and his story proved this to be true.

He said that he enlisted with the U.S. Army in February, 1885, for the specific purpose of fighting Indians—and he got plenty of that. The speaker said, as a cow-hand he made two trips driving cattle from the Mexican border to Kansas before he ever saw a fence, and this fence was put up by an English syndicate who bought up a large tract of land to raise cattle. The Captain's experiences brought him in close contact and association with Geranamo and Nache, famous Apache outlaw Indians, as well as hundreds of others, and he told of many fights and near-fights with the savages of the early days when they were on the warpath. Detachments with which he was connected made trips all over the western country and north into Canada after killer Indians.

Captain Rynning in early Arizona days served as warden at Florence and Yuma prisons, as well as a peace officer in various parts of the state. His entire life has been rich with exciting experiences and the life of a hardy outdoor scout and soldier.

Roy Churchill, Beach district supervisor of Safeway-MacMarr stores, was a guest of Jake Watson.

Brawley Man Loses Life In Ocean Here Thursday

Ed Miller of Brawley was drowned in the surf at Ocean Beach Thursday noon when he went out into the ocean beyond his depth. He was caught by a tide and was reported in distress about 12:30, it was said. Local life guards failed to get to the man and guard Chas. Hardy of Mission Beach was called at 12:45. The body was recovered an hour later near Mission bay channel and though Dr. J. W. Wilhoit and life guards endeavored to resuscitate him for 45 minutes, they worked without success. Miller was staying with a friend, Dick Richards, at Camp Holiday.

Parents, educators and clear-thinking citizens are endorsing Y. A. Jacques for office No. 1 of the Superior Court because of his deep knowledge of, and sympathetic attitude toward family problems and youth delinquency. The family relations court he advocates is a distinct step toward new ideals in the administration of justice.

VOTE JACQUES FOR JUDGE

MAYOR TWO YEARS BEHIND IN HIS INVESTIGATION

City dailies the first of the week carried a story that Mayor Benbough had made a week end trip of inspection north as far as Long Beach and come home with the thought in mind that San Diego's beaches could and should be kept cleaner. He has passed the word along to various departments who seem surprised that the Mayor should have thought of such a thing.

Many times during the past three years different civic bodies at Ocean Beach have made strenuous complaint against trash, litter, and keep being allowed on the beach to the detriment of a pleasing condition for our thousands of visitors, but it was difficult to get any action a great majority of the time.

During the past month, since our present city manager ordered a change of policy in beach cleaning, we are getting better service in this line than has been given us for at least three years.

LET THE GOOD WORK GO ON.

SURPRISES A FEATURE OF PLEASANT PARTY

Thursday evening of last week Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boone Sadler, of 4761 Newport avenue entertained Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Duckett at a dinner in honor of the Duckett's 4th wedding anniversary. Mrs. C. S. Bates of Mission Beach was also present.

Following the dinner the members of the Boys Club of Trinity Episcopal church came with a surprise gift to the honored couple, a set of Monterey dishes. Mr. Duckett is the organizer of the Boys Club. Mrs. Bates, who sponsored the organization, in turn presented each boy with a beautiful hand knitted muffler.

Refreshments were served and a most pleasant time enjoyed.

Post 2415 V.F.W. auxiliary of Ocean Beach will hold their annual bazaar and card party at 5008 Newport avenue, Saturday, July 18th. There will be a food sale in the morning and card party in the evening at 8 p.m. Bridge and 500.

Large Crowd Interested In Hearing Candidates

A capacity house last Monday night attended the mass meeting held for the purpose of hearing from candidates for various offices to be voted on at the August primary.

The meeting was called by the Allied Civic Ass'n. cooperating with the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce who gave up their regular meeting night for the purpose.

President Elmer Steele of the Allied Civic body presided with George N. Speer chairman for the evening. Mr. Steele in opening the meeting stated that special objectives of his organization were a fishing pier at Ocean Beach, additional high school buildings at Collier park, the continued improvement of W. Point Loma blvd., and rest rooms and other facilities on the beach.

The candidates were given ten minutes each for their talks, some using up the full time and others taking only two or three minutes to state their record or qualifications.

The first speaker was Ed Isaac, candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket who said he stood for the abolition of child labor, a pension for all over 60 years of age, a shorter work week—favoring a 30-hour week, better distribution of wealth by raising wages, the Nationalization of credit and to take the profits of war to insure peace.

Wayne Compton, attorney, candidate for the same office, said he too stood for the abolishment of child labor but would go a step further and when the young folks were out of school or college he would meet them at the threshold and give them a guiding hand until they are firmly established. He said he was behind the policies of President Roosevelt and the Democratic platform.

John J. Brennan, another Democratic aspirant to Congress, said he believed entirely in the Wagner bill on child welfare, that he stood for an old age pension as large as our country could stand, without serious injury to its resources, and that he stood behind President Roosevelt in his social security program and his determination to put the welfare of men, women and children, above all else.

Dr. E. O. Tyler, was then given an opportunity by the chairman to introduce the Republican candidate for congress, which he did in a flowery manner. This aspirant, Ed Sample, said he stood for the Republican platform in its entirety and that he was strong for a 2 per cent transaction tax for the benefit of the old age pension. He said research in 1921 of a 1 per cent turnover tax had been estimated would return 6 to 8 million dollars.

Following Sample Mrs. Mercedes Gleeson, speaking for Gov. Landon, gave an extensive harangue, criticizing President Roosevelt's work program and policies, with little or no good sense in her talk.

Major Bowers, candidate for the state assembly, took several minutes to tell of the work he is doing as a public service to the county, and also said he favored the construction of jetties at the entrance to Mission bay channel and the improvement of Mission Bay State Park.

Arthur Baylor, candidate for assemblyman, spoke enthusiastically for the Townsend plan, and said if elected he would strive to improve the beaches and other interests of the city and state.

Ralph Wallace, assemblyman of the 78th district and candidate for reelection, devoted most of his time to needed improvement of Mission bay and said this work had been delayed much too long, mostly he said because it was in the hands of the State Park Board who had too much to do and too little money to expend. He termed the Mission Bay State Park an orphan and one of San Diego's greatest "hidden assets", saying that he would work diligently for a local park board to improve Mission bay, if reelected to the assembly.

Y. A. Jacques, candidate for judge of Superior Court No. 1, said he favored the Townsend plan, however, his special interest at the present time was his belief that to help the younger generation would be the establishment of a Court of Family Relations which could be done without additional cost and of great benefit to the youth of our state and nation.

James A. Parsons, candidate for supervisor of the 1st district, spoke next, criticizing the present county government in allowing many leaks to its employment departments and expense of operation. His condemnation was general with no specific departments set out.

Edgar F. Hastings, chairman of the board of supervisors came next, and in opening his talk answered Mr. Parsons with the request that he should make known any leaks in expense of county government and they would immediately be looked into. He further stated that it was the mistaken opinion of some, that the supervisors looked after the city streets as well as the enactment of state laws, that this was not so, that the city council was responsible for the improvement and upkeep of city streets and the assembly and legislature was responsible for creating laws, many of which had to be enforced by the supervisors. Hastings said he had lived on Point Loma for 29 years, always active in upbuilding of the city and county, had been instrumental of the establishment of Point Loma high school and securing of additional facilities at Ocean Beach and other elementary schools of the north shore area. He spoke of his cooperation in endeavoring to have a fishing pier built here, which had failed thru no fault of his own, but that this fight was not over and that the outcome, for this improvement would no doubt be successful as it was the logical place for such a project. The speaker has also been active in recommending to various officials, the establishment of a junior high school at Collier park and with increasing school population this project must of necessity become a reality. Hastings' activity in securing construction of the civic center has also been commendable and untiring.

Closing the meeting Elmer Steele invited anyone having beach and Point Loma interests at heart to attend the meetings of the Allied Civic association held on the 4th Friday of each month.

Wayne Compton Out For Congress

In a formal announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress, Wayne Compton well-known attorney declares the paramount issue this campaign is the reelection of President Roosevelt. He says the Democratic National convention at Philadelphia adopted a platform which is the President's program for the next four years, which program Compton adopts as his personal platform in his Congressional race.

After pledging complete cooperation with President Roosevelt, Compton takes up local matters, including new Federal legislation to amend the Federal municipal bankruptcy Act, recently declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court, which he says now appears necessary in order that our Matoon Act and Irrigation District problems may be finally solved. As a Matoon District property owner he says that he is familiar with that problem and that he will cooperate with the county and Irrigation District authorities in securing such action in Washington as may be useful.

Compton's friends say that his eighteen years residence in San Diego County, and his more than six years in Imperial county, during which time he has been actively engaged in business and deeply interested in civic affairs, qualifies him exceptionally well to fill the office of Congressman from this district. He was selected by the National Administration to head the NRA in San Diego county and the Compliance Board in San Diego city. He also served on the San Diego Wages Board and as a member of the Lay Advisory Committee to the State Relief Administration, all of which, his friends insist, gave him an opportunity to cooperate with the President in an exceptional manner. During his residence in Imperial county he officially represented Imperial Valley at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915.

Continuing, Compton says: "If I am sent to Congress I will support the President wholeheartedly in his effort to give security to those of our citizens who are faced with the hazards of old age and unemployment and to the less fortunate of our people. The foundation for this has been laid in the Social Security Act. The President intends to maintain and insure for all the comforts of life in accordance with the increasingly high American standard of living. This is one of the leading planks in the President's program."

Compton emphasizes his accord with the President in the maintenance of a strong Navy and adequate national defense in all branches of the service. He says that San Diego harbor must be developed to its maximum efficiency and American shipping and commerce must be encouraged.

The Federal government should continue to cooperate closely with San Diego and Imperial counties in developing their natural resources to the fullest extent.

Especially stressing the importance of the placement of boys and girls, upon leaving school, in healthful and moral occupations, Compton proposes an extension of the CCC program to include other forms of work for the youth of the country.

Drouth Crisis Brings Federal Aid—Business Revival Continues in First Half of 1936—Steel Industry Fights Drive for Unionization.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

FEARS that drouth may irretrievably destroy farm crops in North and South Dakota, eastern Montana and Wyoming prompted President Roosevelt to marshal $500,000,000 in relief funds to combat the damage and to develop further plans for fighting drouth.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry W. Wallace, who left Washington for a personal survey of the stricken areas, declared that from all reports conditions had become as serious as they were in 1934, due to lack of sorely needed rains.

The secretary declared that unless rains descend in the sun-scorched regions the government will buy 30,000,000 head of cattle in the next month.

In St. Paul, Minn., the governors of the five drouth-stricken northwestern states met with Federal Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and administrators from the various states. Mr. Hopkins ordered relief jobs made immediately available for from 25,000 to 50,000 farmers who have seen their sole source of livelihood destroyed. The jobs were to be made available on water conservation projects, farm-to-market roads, rural schools and recreational projects.

President Roosevelt, in Washington, appointed a special committee composed of Secretary Wallace, Budget Director Daniel Bell, Aubrey Williams, Assistant Works Progress Administrator and Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator. They will work in cooperation with a committee of department of agriculture officials. The President instructed Budget Director Bell to study government appropriations to determine what funds are available.

CONTINUING business recovery during the first six months of 1936 fulfilled the hopes of optimistic prognosticators and surpassed the expectations of conservative forecasters.

All the leading trade barometers registered fair business weather at the close of the first half of the year. The production of automobiles reached 2,400,000 units in the first six months of 1936, the best for the period since 1929.

Improvement was further reflected by the steel industry, the operations of which rose from 49.2 per cent of capacity at the start of the year to 71.2 per cent at the end of June. The output of electricity climbed steadily to reach an all time peak in June.

The steady recovery of the railroads was indicated by carloadings which worked up to approach their best levels since 1931. The figures for the first six months of 1936 were substantially better than those for the similar period of 1935. A strong upsurge of home building gave impetus to the construction industry although it still remained at subnormal levels.

AN INCREASE of 90 per cent in the cash farm income on cotton, wheat, tobacco, corn and hogs from 1932 to 1935 was recorded under the Agricultural Adjustment act, invalidated by the Supreme court last January, according to the annual report of Chester C. Davis, former administrator, made public in Washington.

Cash farm income from these five major farm products which came under production control, rental and benefit payments was $1,365,000,000 in 1932, the year before the AAA became operative. For 1935 it was $2,593,000,000.

The report pointed out that cash farm income from all other products increased in the same period from $3,012,000,000 to $4,307,000,000. Mr. Davis, who was recently appointed by President Roosevelt to the Federal Reserve board, declared that cash available for living expenses, taxes and interest from farm cash income was the highest in 1935 since 1929, and two and one-half times greater than it was in 1932.

DEFYING a drive to force unionization of its 500,000 workers, the steel industry in a strongly worded statement issued by the American Iron and Steel Institute declared "it will oppose any attempt to compel its employees to join a union or pay tribute for the right to work."

Although the statement did not mention him by name, it was regarded by observers as the first official response to the recent announcement by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, of a campaign to unionize steel employees.

In order to prevent the "closed shop," the industry said it "will use its resources to the best of its ability to protect its employees and their families from intimidation, coercion and violence and to aid them in maintaining collective bargaining free from interference from any source."

The unionization attempt comes at the time when steel operations have set a new record for 1936. Reasserting its belief in the principles of collective bargaining, the industry's statement pointed out that employees now pick their own representatives for collective bargaining by secret ballot. The statement declares:

"The steel industry is recovering from six years of depression and huge losses and the employees are beginning to receive the benefit of increased operations. Any interruption of the forward movement will seriously injure the employees and their families and all business dependent upon the industry and will endanger the welfare of the country."

IN ESTES PARK, Colo., Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, continued his vacation begun with his family the week before and made plans for reconvening of the Kansas legislature and for the acceptance speech he will deliver in Topeka on July 23.

Although Governor Landon was resting preparatory to the rigors of the campaign, affairs of his state and conferences with political advisers occupied considerable of his attention.

When the Kansas legislature reconvenes a proposed amendment to the state constitution will be introduced, giving the state broad power to provide far-reaching legislation for social welfare and to co-operate with the federal government. Governor Landon was quoted as describing the proposed amendment as "satisfactory."

The amendment, which may be the basis for similar action in other states, reads:

"Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws providing for financial assistance to aid infirm or dependent persons; for the public health; unemployment compensation and general social security and providing for the payment thereof by tax or otherwise and to receive aid from the federal government therefor."

"YIELDING to the urgings of party leaders, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York announced that he would run again for the office of governor. The governor had announced several months ago that he would not be a candidate again, giving as his reasons the press of personal business and a desire to retire to private life.

Democratic leaders declared the governor's decision will help the national ticket to carry New York in the election next November.

In a statement issued to newspapers, Governor Lehman said he could "no longer resist" the appeals of national and state Democratic leaders. The statement said:

"Regardless of personal considerations, however compelling, I feel that I can no longer resist the pleas of my party both in the state and in the nation or of those with whom I have worked in closest association for many years and with whom I have waged the fight for equal opportunity and social security."

"Therefore if my party in this state chooses to nominate me again and if the people of the state again call on me for service I shall proudly accept the call and will devote myself wholeheartedly to the interest of the people of the state."

RETIRING from the post of Comptroller General, J. R. McCarl announced that following the expiration of his term of office he would aid in the government reorganization study undertaken by the senate committee headed by Senator Byrd of Virginia.

Gen. McCarl criticized New Deal emergency agencies as "loosely and extravagantly set up" and as "tax consuming in the extreme." He declared that a systematic reorganization of both regular and emergency agencies would improve government administration and reduce the cost to taxpayers.

PERSISTENCE of strikes in the provinces kept France in a state of unrest. A gain of 225,000 new members was reported by the general confederation of labor, organized labor's official body.

Altogether it was estimated that 100,000 workers were still absent from their jobs, in spite of reports of strike settlements in scattered sections throughout the country.

The French Riviera witnessed a general exodus of foreign tourists from 450 hotels and resorts following a lockout by the proprietors. The hotels were closed indefinitely after the employers declared they could not meet workers' demands for more pay and shorter hours. This retaliation by the owners against the threat of a workers' strike upset the summer tourist season, one of the most profitable to the French.

Government representatives were busy attempting to settle three serious strikes—iron and steel workers in the Lorraine region, naval shipyard workers at St. Nazaire and employees on the pari-mutuel machines at Parisian race tracks.

WHILE representatives of leading powers gathered in Geneva to lift League of Nations economic sanctions against Italy and the refugee emperor, Haile Selassie, of Ethiopia prepared to plead the cause of his nation's freedom. European statesmen considered the possibility of a reorganization and reformation of the League.

Observers agreed that while informal discussions on the League reformation would be held, it was probable that the question of reorganizing the international pact body would be postponed until the September assembly.

DESPITE his previous decision declaring unconstitutional the tax on railroads to permit pensions, Justice Jennings Bailey of the District of Columbia Supreme Court ruled in an oral opinion that the railroad retirement board could pay pensions to railroad workers.

The justice declared that his previous decision on the validity of the rail pension laws could not be construed to mean that the retirement act itself was unconstitutional. He ruled that the government could proceed to collect from rail workers a sum amounting to 3 1/2 per cent of their salaries and could use the money to pay retirement pensions to the workers when they reach 65 years of age or have worked 40 years.

He also ruled that the railroad retirement board could proceed to collect information on which to allot the pensions, provided it did so at its own expense and by compensating the railroads for any clerical work involved.

Justice Bailey's original decision in the case had specifically enjoined the railroad retirement board from taking any steps to compel the railroads to furnish information. The decision ruled that the tax law adopted to finance the pensions was unconstitutional and ruled that the tax measure and retirement measure setting up means of paying the pensions were "inseparable."

BRECKINRIDGE LONG, American ambassador to Italy, submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt because of illness. The diplomat declared that he hopes to recuperate his health during the summer and to take an active part in the Presidential campaign in the autumn.

Mr. Long's place will be taken by Undersecretary of State William Phillips. He will represent the United States government in Rome in an effort to solve Italo-American problems arising from Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia.

Mr. Phillips has had a distinguished career in the diplomatic service. He has held posts in Europe, the Far East and Canada and has three times been sub-secretary in the State department.

The most pressing problem facing Mr. Phillips in his new post is the regularizing of America's relations with Ethiopia, now claimed by Italy as a territory, but still recognized by this country as independent. The importance of this question, observers declare, is indicated by the selection of Mr. Phillips for the Italian post. Only on rare occasions in the past have active sub-cabinet officers been given diplomatic posts.

FLOODS which followed a series of cloudbursts in south Texas caused property damage estimated at millions of dollars and cost the lives of 22 people.

Rains which fell at the rate of nine to ten inches a minute swelled the creeks and rivers of the afflicted areas into wild floods. It was reported that thousands of acres of farm land in Gonzales and adjoining counties were inundated.

As the flood waters receded they revealed a grave picture of destruction. The flood ripped through the settlement of Kyle, between Austin and San Antonio, washing out bridges and wrecking a train. It was here that the loss of life was greatest.

In the Guadalupe Valley it was estimated that 300,000 acres of farm lands were inundated. Although the waters subsided rapidly, the flood had wiped out the corn and cotton crops.

magic of shelving the extra poundage one longs to discard preparatory to getting one's self into shape for that svelte lithe appearance in one's bathing and beach suit. This miracle-working aoudoudois reducer is pictured in the foreground. A smart gym gob suit it is, made of an exceedingly good-looking crepe-texture rubber that keeps the crepe of the body open and encourages a healthy perspiration. When that happens you can start making your swimming dates for to your glee and satisfaction the pounds will begin to roll off until normal weight is reached. These crepe-textured rubber gym gobs are styled in three comfortable pieces—slacks, shorts and shirt.

Big news and no doubt about it, is the beach and swimming suit in the new and startling front page newspaper print cotton. See it pictured to the left in the group. Prints this season are noted for novelty and certainly this newspaper-print cotton captures first honors in that respect. Another interesting item is the hat made of pique that is nothing more than a brim which ties at the back. It is without crown and can be untied and flattened out to be washed and ironed.

CHIC FOR SUMMER

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

According to the modern way of thinking a costume is only as smart and correct and goodlooking as the accessories worn with it. In other words it is the accessories that make the costume and this is the challenge that fashionables must meet these times. In the matter of observing the little niceties of accessory details the lady in the picture is costumed to perfection. Her exquisitely ladylike straw hat is an exponent of smartest millinery fashion. The fur that borders the sleeves of her jewel-clasped crepe frock carries a convincing message in regard to the importance of "summer furs" in the mode. Her long simple slip-on suede gloves are eminently correct. As to the handsome bag she carries it is the accent supreme of chic.

Polka Dots in Style.

Mannish little polka dotted silk cravats and belts are worn with soft frocks and polka dot scarfs walk out with sports coats.

FEATHERS IN STYLE FOR HAT TRIMMING

Feathers are becoming more and more important as trimming for hats, according to Erik Braagaard, the young Danish milliner whose recently established Paris house has had unusual success.

Braagaard even makes entire hats and headresses of feathers. He takes a single yellow bird of paradise and curves it cleverly about the head holding it in position with double bands of black velvet that cross the back of the head. This hat designer is building crowns higher and higher for morning and sports wear. The conical or thimble crowns, likewise are featured on some of the afternoon hats while others are trimmed with bunches of fruit or flowers.

Late Offerings of Prints

Copy Design of Wall Paper

Some of the new prints look like wallpaper designs. Vertical stripes of flowers, massed together, are printed on pastel colored backgrounds. Other materials are printed with enormous sprays of flowers or vines in conventional wallpaper patterns. One house has applied a leaf and vine design in black or gandy on a dinner dress of white organdy. The veins in the black organdy leaves are etched in shiny black beads.

The Kamakura Daibutsu, cast in 1252 by Ono Goroemon, was originally installed in a large building, damaged in 1368 by storm and carried away by a tidal wave in 1494, two years after Columbus had sailed his caravels into the Caribbean. Since then it has remained uncovered, a sublime symbol of patience, secure on its pedestal, against which the waters of the sea arose in accordance with prophecy and halted lest they disturb the meditations that had remained unbroken for 700 years.

Bracelets Combine Both

Real Beauty and Utility

Since costume jewelry has come rushing back into style, there are all sorts of new bracelets on the market. For evening wear there are wide bands of gold or silver set with large, square precious stones. The largest center stone opens up to reveal a miniature powder compact and puff, while the stones on either side open to show paste rouge and eye shadow. The clasps of the new bracelets are small lipstick.

Bob Davis Reveals

Centuries of Competition in Homage to the Great Buddha

UPON entering Japan prepare to meet Daibutsu, principal of the Buddhist divinities. Everywhere one turns is to be found evidence of this transplanted religion out of India that entered Japan in 552 A. D. Today 71,193 temples and 41,962,000 adherents testify to its influence in the Flowery Kingdom.

Out of Buddhism in this part of the world eleven sects have sprung up, the Shinshu, which discards the idea of celibacy for the clergy, with 20,000 temples and 13,000,000 devotees, leading by a great majority.

During the earlier periods when sects were forming at a rate that threatened to retard rather than advance the teachings and spread of Buddhism, the Emperor Shomu, 749 A. D., caused to be erected at Nara a Daibutsu that still enjoys the distinction of being the largest metal image in the world.

One standing in the presence of this amazing creation, more fearsome than words can convey, cannot but be impressed with its character and its immensity. The temple in which it is housed offers little or no light for the figure. From every angle mighty pillars obstruct the view of this somber, awe-spreading colossus, twice almost destroyed by fire, for centuries neglected, at last restored by the Emperor Meiji, 1903, and completed without the slightest alteration in style by Emperor Taisho, 1913.

Image is Sinister

The Nara Daibutsu, containing 437 tons of bronze, 7 tons of vegetable wax, 288 pounds of gold, 165 pounds of mercury, the two latter ingredients used solely for gilding, although most of the glitter has disappeared, leaving only a black metallic epidermis, African in tone, which gives the image a sinister character, suggesting something medieval as it reposes cross-legged in the shadows of the temple.

The right hand is open and held waist high, the left likewise resting upon the knee, while the figure itself is seated upon a throne of lotus leaves 68 feet in diameter, made up of 56 petals. Behind this tarnished Daibutsu is a halo 38 feet in height, containing 12 small images of Buddha, each nine feet in height.

The sheltering temple, built the following year, was completely destroyed by fire in the Twelfth century, and with it the head and shoulders of Daibutsu. By imperial order, the head was replaced and a new temple made ready in 1190. But the monument to Buddha, although escaping destruction, was not to enjoy peace, for, 370 years later, the temple was again destroyed by fire and the unfortunate Daibutsu was exposed to the elements for more than a hundred years, all of which added no luster to its appearance.

In the year 1700, the temple, rebuilt and completed after three years' labor, became the center of Buddhist pilgrimages to the extent of 3,000,000 people per annum, although in the next century the temple all but came to a complete ruin.

The comparatively recent restoration of the temple puts it in a class by itself: Width 188 feet, depth 166 feet, height 160 feet, and pillars, 60 in number, 45 1/2 feet in diameter. Said to be the largest wooden structure in the world.

A week later, at Kamakura, under a blue sky, the whole landscape shimmering midst the verdure of spring, in a forest of pine and maple mottled with cherry blossoms, I came suddenly upon another and smaller Daibutsu, cast 500 years later; a work in green bronze, 42 feet high, and weighing only 42 tons.

Smaller Buddha Has Beauty

But there was beauty in the face, humility in the downcast eyes and incomparable serenity in the posture. The two hands are laid in the lap, palms upward, thumbs touching, the Buddhist sign for steadfast faith. And over all, ineffable, resignation approaching sublimity to whomsoever would "look carefully within himself" and find the Buddha.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK AND BOBBY COON WARN THEIR FRIENDS

BOBBY COON had been so frightened when he had sprung that trap there by the Laughing Brook that probably he would have run clear back to his home in the Green Forest had he not found Billy Mink waiting for him at the old log where they had met earlier in the evening. Billy was grinning.

"What are you running for?" he demanded. "I thought you were not afraid."

Bobby Coon stopped. "It—tried to catch me!" he panted. "It—jumped right at me!"

Billy Mink chuckled. "But I see it didn't catch you," said he. "Didn't I tell you it wouldn't hurt you if you put your paw under it? That kind of a trap is perfectly harmless as long as you do not step in it. I'm glad you sprung it. I sprung the one on the other side of the Laughing Brook the same way. Now, both of those traps are un-tilly the trapper sets them again.

"Hi, You Fellows!" Called Billy Mink. "Come Over Here!"

"We can go up and down the Laughing Brook through the openings in those little fences with nothing to fear as long as those traps are in plain sight. That trapper will probably come around tomorrow, but for the remainder of to-night there is nothing for us to worry about. Let's go down the Laughing Brook to the Smiling Pool."

The idea of going down to the Smiling Pool was too much for Bobby Coon to resist. So he followed Billy Mink down the bank of the Laughing Brook. When they reached the trap which Bobby had sprung, Billy Mink kicked it aside as he passed. It was plain to see that Billy Mink had known what he was talking about when he said that now that trap was perfectly harmless. Then, without hesitat-

DOING NOW

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

DIVIDE the week in seven equal parts, Divide the seven into twenty-four, And then by sixty, ere the morning starts, The sixty then by even sixty more— And yet we think in years, yea, even lives, When with each second all life re-arrives.

We think in years, who ought to think in these, Of months to come, of weeks to yet appear, Delay in days, waste hours, the minute flees, While ev'ry second life again is here.

We dream tomorrow, plan this afternoon; It is too late, and now is not too soon.

Live now, do now!—for now is all you own— Whatever you endeavor, now begin!

Who thinks tomorrow finds tomorrow frown, The season gone before the seed is in.

For all men do, whatever fields they plow, They do by doing, and by doing now!

Squeezing water from a pencil is a feat that proves humorous as well as mystifying.

You ask a friend for a pencil. Receiving it, you clutch it in your right hand and deliver a squeeze. Water promptly pours from the pencil.

You need a small, dampened sponge, which you carry partly wrapped in a handkerchief. Reaching in your own pocket for a pencil, you find none; as you ask a friend for one you obtain the sponge.

Squeeze the pencil and the sponge together. Before returning the pencil bring out your handkerchief to rub the pencil dry. Put the sponge away with the handkerchief.

The Dictator's Job

Dictators have the hardest job in the world, which is to keep on dictating. Sooner or later they are caught in a vicious circle, because people—over a long period—can no more be stopped from thinking than they can be stopped from breathing. A dictator tightens and tightens and then either (a) loosens up in order to survive, or (b) breaks down in counter-revolution or counter-dictatorship. In each case the people, to some degree, are thrown back on their capacity for self-government — John Gunther in Cosmopolitan.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

With candidates for president in the political field by all the parties, the next business of outstanding importance is to popularize the one who will be fortunate enough to win at the November election. Presidential election is always the quadrennial event that not only awakens new enthusiasm, but millions will look forward to economic improvement and better times in general.

Of all the years, this should be one to stir the voter to an educational enthusiasm. He must be guided right, in so great a government responsibility. How little many regard their vote in such a time as this! We, perhaps, do not always realize our place in the political field. More attention and money is always given to elect candidates, regardless, sometimes of their qualification for the important office. This is quite commonly a mistake in the congressional and senatorial race; indeed, it may happen in the choice of a president.

Promises and party platform principles are commonly overlooked in every administration, but stressed with such great emphasis before election that it makes an intelligent voter "set up and take notice," lost in his faith in honest and truthful politics. Fortunately, more often candidates do show their honesty and integrity to carry out the principles of Democracy. These are the worthy kind who deserve our praise and support, because there is hope of a strict and honorable representation. It is because of the bad deeds of the rest that we have become habitual critics with both good and evil officials.

It is one of the deep tragedies of American life; we have gotten into the habit of sneering at our senators and congressmen, and all others in authority. We thus break down the influence of the good and righteous intention. It lessens respect for law, and keeps our best men from entering into the field of politics. Fortunately in our land, the citizen is free to take a very large part in efforts to purify the state and nation, and make government a more beneficial institution. It is invariably a Christian duty to go and vote. Lasting reform will come more quickly when there is more willingness to look at questions from the standpoint of social good regardless of party.

The average layman must get a good laugh when he learns what he is composed of, and the elements which feed the body and keep it alive. This is just a material record; of course this is leaving out the mental structure with all its ideals, intelligence, moral or the temper of the being. Ordinarily a person has somewhere in his system 3 1/4 ounces of potassium; and when he fails to have that amount he is a dangerous, sick man! This little chemical is a light, bluish white, silvery metal with a great affinity for oxygen. Without it plant life would not develop to maturity. We learn that potassium in the soil protects life from plant diseases because of its bitterness and this same bitter element becomes a medicine of mankind who is composed largely of plant life. Potassium is the "self starter" that gives us a shove when we want to speed up. But this is not all, there are 16 chemical substances in the human body, but chemistry tells us that there are 92 elements. But the 16 which properly balanced and put together make a human body. Ask your physician to give you a list of them. He may scowl, however.

California's Constitution is due to be overhauled at the November election. Members of the State Legislature have supplied no less than 14 amendments which is believed, will improve the State's affair in a more equitable, economical and legitimate manner. Three of the amendments are considered most vital and important. They are to grant the Legislature full authority to amend or repeal provisions of the Permanent Registration Law. To create a court of Criminal Appeal to supplement the District Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court; and the third, to give the Legislature full control over the California Prison for Women at Tehachapi, which is now under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Prison directors. Nearly every other amendment is relative to some form of revised taxation, which is and always will be, a moot question before the voters. It was Henry Ward Beecher who said: "Law is valuable not because it is law, but because there is right in it."

Slogans seem to be the all-embracing spirit in business, social contests, etc.; and just now it is getting into political campaigns, which is not strange at such a time as this. Good slogans are effective implements, and not only create publicity but they most always bear a message with such a useful phrase that it makes the necessary "hit" for the intended advertising. Cities and chambers of commerce all know the value of a catchy slogan even better than individuals. A slogan should be kept alive, after once advertised. One of the best national slogans is "Buy American." It has taken on a nation-wide campaign and is already launched in the biggest industries of over 28 states. There is no better time for such an economic line of action than the present. Home patronage is a vital step toward industrial loyalty.

Through the perfection of rapid transit in the automobile and airplane, with the scientific uses of the radio, we have nationalized and abolished geographical boundaries of states and nations. This should prepare the way for a better understanding and tolerance of neighbor states as well as nations. There should be an intelligent response to ideals of international harmony, and weld an unbroken bond of friendship and peace on this whole great earth. The League of Nations is exerting an influence over powers through a training in the technique of friendly thought and good will. It all proves that the greatest works are not the accomplishments so much from strength and force as perseverance and tolerance of high ideals.

In the summer time when the hot sun blazes and the mercury soars and you find your strength sapped and your ambition dented, don't let it get you down. Before many more summers have passed, men will be making their own weather, as cool as they wish it, right in their own homes, offices and workshops.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED! On your November 3rd ballot you will be asked to vote for or against "Repeal of the Sales Tax." Beware! You can't vote for Sales Tax Repeal without voting for Single Tax.

To vote for Single Tax is to vote for an amendment to the California State Constitution, placing in our constitution a fundamental law that would put practically all taxes on land—taxes that most people would be utterly unable to pay. And this failure to pay would mean confiscation by the state of practically every home, every ranch and farm, every city lot.

Landlords would have to boost rents—merchants would have to raise the prices of food, clothing and other necessities in a vain attempt to meet this destructive tax. The state would go bankrupt. Thousands would be thrown out of their jobs.

The passage of this deceitful measure would bring chaos and disaster to your state, to your home, to you.

Tell others the truth about this Single Tax trap. Don't delay. Get out today and work against it. Save your home and your job. Send for literature. Do it now!

Southern California Co-ordinating Headquarters have been established for the purpose of assisting organizations, communities and public spirited citizens of all Southern California to combat this drastic and dangerous constitutional amendment.

SINGLE TAX BILL UNDER GUISE OF SALES TAX REPEAL

This Year It's Different

Like pride, you know, overconfidence also "goeth before the fall." Thus it was a point well made when the California Committee Against the Single Tax, in the South, and the California Association Against Single Tax, in the north, last week jointly cautioned the State not to be too confident that the revolutionary tax measure will go down to defeat in November. The mistaken conclusion that the Single Tax cannot pass might be drawn from the fact that it has been snowed under in seven past elections: by a 75,000 majority in 1912; by 100,000 in 1914; by 163,000 in 1915; by 316,000 in 1916; by 242,000 in 1918; by 367,000 in 1920 and by 391,000 in 1922.

But this year it's different. The measure is swathed in the enticing sugar coating of "Sales Tax Re-

SAMPLE TO TALK HERE MONDAY NIGHT

At the Woman's club house, corner Abbot and Newport, Monday night, July 20, the Ocean Beach Townsend club will have as its speaker the Hon. Ed Sample, their candidate for Congress on the republican ticket. Mr. Sample is a forceful speaker and devoted to the Townsend cause. Refreshments and dancing. Everyone welcome.

Many voters cast their ballots against all taxes as a matter of policy, and might vote for sales tax repeal without realizing they were voting for the ruinous Single Tax.

That is why everyone in California must be made to understand that you can't vote sales tax out without voting Single Tax in. That is why California must guard against overconfidence, lest the State trip and plunge headlong toward financial catastrophe.

Woman Active In Civic Affairs Laid At Rest

Mrs. Sarah Matilda Sweeney, wife of John L. Sweeney, 4965 Cape May avenue, Ocean Beach, who passed away at her home Tuesday morning, was one of our best known women, and one of the active members of the American Legion auxiliary, and other organizations. The Ocean Beach Woman's club originated from a desire on the part of Mrs. Sweeney to further civic betterment and bring about a closer community interest among the women of Ocean Beach. She was well known in naval circles, having been his wife, during the Spanish war, of George Henry Ellis, Chief Yeoman, who was the only man killed during the engagement of the Spanish fleet, under command of Admiral Cervera, and the American squadrons, commanded by Winfield S. Schley, in the Brooklyn, and William T. Sampson, in the New York. It was nearly 10 years ago that Logan E. Ruggles mentioned in an article in The Evening Tribune the fact that Ellis was killed during the famous battle, July 3, 1898, off the entrance of Santiago de Cuba, and received a note from John L. Sweeney reading in part:

"In reference to your article in today's Tribune, Chief Yeoman George Henry Ellis left a wife and baby son, George H. jr., in Brooklyn, N. Y., and she is now a resident of San Diego. She is now my wife. Ellis and I were apprentice boys together on the old Columbia in 1895-'96, and it was through him that I met the family of Mrs. Sweeney, and married one of the sisters in 1901; she passed away in 1905, and Mrs. Ellis and I were married in 1911. I transferred to the fleet naval reserve in 1920, after more than 20 years' of active naval service, and we have been residents here since that time. George H. Ellis now is with a large radio concern in New York."

Ellis was born at Peoria, Ill., Oct. 26, 1875, and enlisted in the navy in 1892, as an apprentice boy, and after his apprenticeship, remained out of the service for a time, and came back in the navy for the Spanish war. He was serving on the battleship Brooklyn at the time of the battle, and was stationed amidships to give stadiometer ranges to the commanding officer, who in turn communicated them to the gun divisions. Ellis stepped toward the side of the Brooklyn's upper deck to verify a range, and was struck in the head by an enemy shell and was killed.

He was buried with full military honors at Camp McCalla, Guantanamo, Cuba, July 5, 1898, and the body later was removed to the Evergreen cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1898.

An agreement was made at the outbreak of the Spanish war between Ellis and Sweeney that if anything happened to either, the other would take care of the family. The men became widely separated. Sweeney was sent to the Asiatic station on the old cruiser Concord and took part in the battle of Manila bay, May 1, 1898. There were no casualties on the American side in the latter engagement, and Sweeney heard after the battle of Santiago that his friend had been the only one killed during the engagement.

Ellis and Mrs. Sweeney were married in June, 1896, and George H. jr. was six months old when his father, Ellis, was killed, July 3, 1898. The son was best man at the wedding of Sweeney and his mother at Brooklyn, the summer of 1911, and was at that time 14 years of age.

George H. Ellis, jr., enlisted in the navy at Brooklyn, April 12, 1917, as an electrician, and served on armed guard cargo vessels, and later served on the Brazos, the battleship Arkansas, and was discharged from the Melville, May 9, 1919. He then served aboard a number of passenger liners as a radio operator, serving several years on the Manchuria. He lived in San Diego several years ago, but later returned to a position with station WEAF, New York City. He has two daughters.

Mrs. Sweeney whose maiden name was Simonson, was born in Brooklyn, in 1876, and was 60 years of age. She served last year as secretary of unit No. 433, American Legion auxiliary, was one of the founders of the Ocean Beach Woman's club, and was a former president of the auxiliary unit, and also was a charter member of the auxiliary. She had been in ill health for several months, but during the past two weeks was considered in a dangerous condition from a heart ailment.

MODERN WAYS of Cooking Fish

BECAUSE the baby in the Mother Goose rhyme was man enough to eat it is no reason for mothers to go on and on frying fish. There are other more healthful and delicious ways of preparing them, highly recommended, unless you happen to be a connoisseur of the art of frying—which so few of us are.

Even broiling and baking fish should be done with a knowledge of the kind of fish to be used, and the best way of broiling or baking it. Dry-meated fish, such as cod, haddock, pollack, and hake, are better adapted for broiling, steaming, stewing or making into a curried dish, for they will keep their shape and not fall to pieces in the process of cooking. Oily-meated fish, such as salmon, shad, mackerel, herring, lake trout and whitefish, are preferable for quick modes of cooking, by the hot oven method.

Don't Overcook Fish

It is well to remember that fish, in general, do not require the slow cooking used for many varieties of meat because its connective tissue is more tender than meat tissue, and overcooking extracts the juices and dries out the fish.

Canners have done extensive research into the proper methods of cooking fish, with the result that housewives order certain fish in cans because they realize that home-cooking cannot equal the perfection with which they are cooked.

Canned salmon is a striking example of this. More salmon is sold in cans than any other fish.

While it is possible to broil or bake salmon very nicely, few people, other than famous hotel and restaurant chefs, have ever achieved near perfection in doing so. Canned salmon, on the other hand, comes to us always lovely in color, tender, juicy, its oils well blended into the salmon texture. Housewives, therefore, have given their time and thought to the many ways to serve salmon.

The following salad and soufflé provide a new and delightful addition to the ever-lengthening list of good salmon dishes.

Nice for Parties

Metropolitan Salmon Salad: Chill the contents of one 7-ounce can of salmon. Open and put the salmon in a small bowl lined with crisp lettuce, being careful not to break up the fish. Mix one-fourth cup mayonnaise with one tablespoon thick sweet or sour cream, one teaspoon vinegar, one tablespoon chopped celery, one tablespoon chopped pimiento, one teaspoon capers and one teaspoon relish. Spread over the salmon. This serves three persons.

Salmon Soufflé: Turn the contents of one 10½-ounce can of strained cereal into a double boiler and heat. Then add the contents of one 1-pound can of salmon which has been flaked, and three tablespoons of butter. Add the beaten yolks of three eggs and salt to taste. Fold in the three stiffly-beaten egg whites and pour into a buttered baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for thirty to thirty-five minutes. Serve at once. Serves eight persons.

A DIFFICULT QUESTION TO DECIDE RIGHTLY

The matter of having life guards clean beaches was discussed by our city council Tuesday, but we do not see how this can be accomplished. The question came up at La Jolla cove where there is only a small beach and possibly where this chore could be done satisfactorily, however, at our own beach, at Mission Beach and Pacific Beach, the work could not be carried out by the life guards considering the long stretch of sandy shore, and limited number of life guards.

If this duty was given the guards at some beaches and not at others there would be some live jockeying by the men so that they be placed where they would have the least manual labor to do.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Life" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

Among the Bible selections is the verse from Paul's first epistle to Timothy: "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." Another citation includes these verses from the First Epistle General of John: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. . . . And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life."

A correlative passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "This is life eternal," says Jesus—"is, not shall be; and then he defines everlasting life as a present knowledge of his Father and of himself—the knowledge of Love, Truth, and Life. 'This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent.'"

Beauty

In the elevator of a big store she noticed a very attractive poster advertising beauty treatment. Out of curiosity she asked the elevator attendant (a funny little Cockney) where the beauty parlor was.

He turned and gave her a good look, noticed presumably that she did not use make-up at all, and then said, "You don't want ter go there mucking your face about. Why not stay as y'are—plain but 'olesome?" —Troy Times-Record.

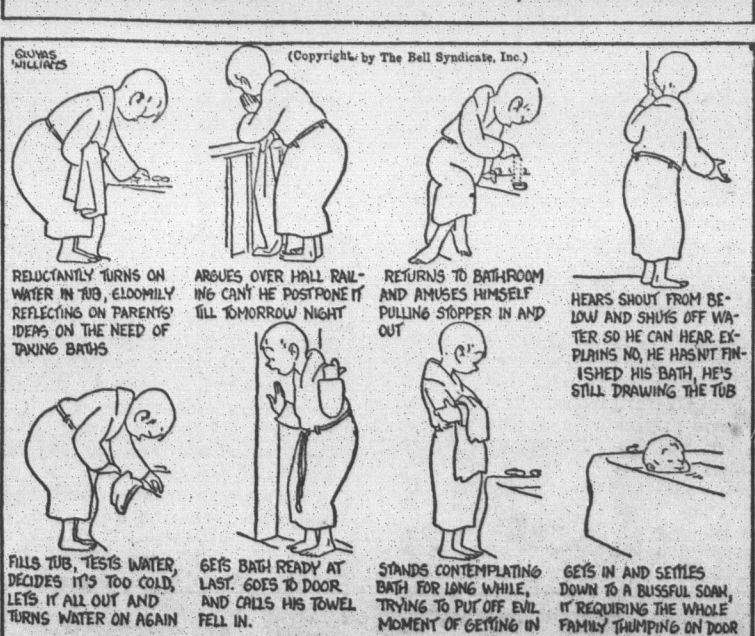

Truss It

She had just begun housekeeping, with the laudable intention of paying ready money upon all occasions, and she entered a high-class purveyor's shop to purchase a chicken.

She selected one, and while she was fumbling in her handbag for a purse the shopman politely asked: "Trussed, madam?" "Oh, dear, no," she indignantly replied. "I wish to pay for it now." —Sydney (Australia) Mail.

Mark Twain's old home in the Connecticut hills—destroyed by fire some years ago—was built from the joint designs of his daughter Clara Clemens, and John Howells, son of William Dean Howells, novelist and critic.

"They did it," once explained Mark to a friend, "without any advice or instructions from me. I had every confidence in their taste and judgment and none in my own. I merely said I wanted three things—a room of my own that would be quiet, a billiard room large enough to play in without jamming the cues into the wall, and a living room forty feet by twenty."

He did also stipulate that the house should cost only a certain sum.

"And did it?" inquired the friend.

"Well," said Mark, "half of it did."

I decided to wait for the results of Anson's search, and I was so sleepy, after the wakeful night and the walk in the open air that I curled up in my rose cushioned chair for ten minutes and slept for forty. I woke to find Harriett in my room, sitting stolidly there confronting me with an air of grim scrutiny.

I sat up quickly, pulling down my rumpled gray frock and brushing my hair out of my eyes, staring at him with something very much like fright. Behind him the door was closed.

"You needn't try to run," he told me, and I flung back, "Why should I run? What do you want, Mr. Harriett?"

"I want to know what you know about all this," he growled at me. "You're in with Deck. I want to know what that row was about—that row with Elkins."

His voice fumbled so at the words that I felt a pang of pity for him in spite of all my other feelings.

"I never saw Alan Deck until I came here," I said and spoke as quietly and gently as I could. "I don't know anything about his affairs."

"That's your story, and you can stick to it before the others. But I want the facts, and I'm prepared to pay for them. And I'll let you off—I'll let you off whatever trouble those stones have got you in for, if you'll tell me everything you know."

"I know nothing."

"You know why you went up to my wife's room last night. You had some reason—even if you saw her slapped you wouldn't go in like that—"

His eyes, grimly skeptical, looked me through and through.

"You can't pull any wool over my eyes. You were meeting Deck before dinner. I want to know what he and what he was threatening my wife about. He wanted money from her—wasn't that it? If you never met him before, as you say, he's interested enough in you now to tell you. Your own safety and a good substantial sum of money ought to make you see the light."

"I'll give you five thousand—five thousand for a few words. Only no faking. I want the truth."

"You are utterly mistaken in me, Mr. Harriett," I said steadily. "I couldn't sell information if I had it. . . . I know nothing at all of Alan Deck and his secrets."

Some one knocked. I called, "Come in," and the door opened. There stood Alan Deck.

At sight of Harriett he stiffened, then, with assumed naturalness to me, "About those pictures—"

Harriett got to his feet; his eyes flickered from Deck back to me with a malevolent sort of satisfaction.

"Well—is it yes?" he said harshly, his look holding mine.

"It's no, Mr. Harriett."

Without another word to me, without a glance toward Deck, he marched past him, out the door.

I burst out, "Oh, why did you come?" to Deck.

His gaze that had followed Harriett to the door flashed back to me.

"What was Dean doing here?"

"Trying to buy me," I said. "Offering me five thousand dollars to find out gown—I want to hold you in my arms, to soft music, you understand—"

And then he dropped into a chair—the deep cushioned chair beside the little white one I was sitting in—and said coaxingly, "Talk to me, Lella. Tell me about your picture puzzles and the fakes and the millionaires you rescue. The pre-depression millionaires. Tell me all the stories of your young art life."

Nothing that we said mattered; it was all about paintings and artists and people and plays.

The telephone broke in on it. Monty Mitchell's voice told me to come down at once.

We both went down, I expecting heaven-knows-what of revelation but finding only that Mitchell wanted my report on the hair ornament.

I murmured that he had said I was barking up the wrong tree, but I scurried back upstairs, and this time I got the crescent with no delay for Miss Van Alstyn was in her room and produced the gewgaw from her jewel box.

"Is there something special about it?" she murmured, and I said lamely enough that I wanted to study the stones. I might as well have studied Plymouth Rock, for there was no blood to be found on them. If there ever had been any, she'd had all the time in the world to wash it off. . . . I gave it back to her and went downstairs again, finding Mitchell and Deck deep in talk.

"I found it. Nothing," I reported shortly to Mitchell.

He merely nodded, then said earnestly, "I am telling Deck this I don't remember stuff won't wash with a coroner's jury."

Deck's eyes, brilliant and haggard, played with him. "What do you suggest I say?"

Monty was ready. As I dropped down on the end of the couch beside him, he offered, low-toned, "Suppose Nora was jealous of Dan and Letty and threatened to raise the roof about them, and you warned her not to. What?"

"Got a cigarette?" said Deck. "Mine are all gone." He put the case he had taken out back in his pocket rather slowly. Casually he mentioned, "What about the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?"

The lawyer did not bat an eyelash. "Isn't that the truth—now that your head has cleared?"

"Why drag in Letty?"

"Why not? You'll have to explain those threats, and that does it—with no discredit to yourself."

Deck grinned. "You're a swell lawyer, Monty."

"And you need one."

Deck rose with a vague word or two. Silently we sat there and watched his tall figure sauntering away. Monty Mitchell's lips were creased in a taut line; he knew, and I knew, with heart-catching anxiety, that whatever Deck had done or not done, whatever had been between him and that dead woman, whatever danger menaced him now, he was going on in his own high-handed way, to play his lone, defiant game. And I was terribly afraid for him.

CHAPTER IX

Nothing happened that night. I gathered in a stout, dignified gray cat that I found promenading the hall and fed it morsels from my squab and tried to pretend that I was not lonely. It seemed a thousand years since I had first entered that room, since I had looked down to those two dark silhouettes in that front window.

I tried again to reconstruct those silhouettes, hoping that some trick of memory would bring to life a forgotten detail, but I was so tired that their shapes wavered fantastically before me.

Nothing was going to interest that jury, I thought, except the finding of those diamonds inside my dress and the report of Deck's violent threats to Nora Harriett. And his absence from the table.

I needed all the rest I could get to face that tomorrow, so I took a hot bath and went to bed.

At first I slept, then as my weariness wore off, my worrying thoughts kept coming to the surface, rousing me, and at last, in the early morning dark I lay wide awake, my mind racing like an engine. I thought of the questions they were likely to ask me and a sudden quail assailed me. I had taken it absolutely for granted that I would tell the same story which I had told Donahy about my reasons for going up to Mrs. Harriett's room, and that Deck would tell his same story, but now—

This was different, this testimony before a coroner and a jury. This was under oath.

Suppose Deck wanted me to tell "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth"—to show that since he had asked me to go up he believed that Nora Harriett was still alive?

I had to find out, I thought, stricken with belated panic, before I went into that jury room. I would phone him for an interview the very moment it was light enough to make my call possible.

Then my mind turned to that handkerchief with the rust marks. Some time on Friday night that handkerchief had been drying on a radiator.

Now a thought came to me. I didn't know all that Donahy had asked, but I knew that in front of me no one had asked if such a handkerchief had been seen.

I made up my mind to see every maid on that floor in the morning.

It was Anson my thoughts circled about. I remembered that Anson had not volunteered anything about the open window, though its being open must have seemed a trifle unusual. She had not volunteered anything. She had given me a distinct impression of diffident reticence.

Elkins, too, had not come forward with his statements until he had been questioned, and then he had had a bad struggle between his duty to his employers and his conscience and love of importance. I began to think it quite possible that some one had seen something that only direct questioning would bring out.

Day was a desperate laggard. Very slowly the pale oblongs of my window lightened.

Seven o'clock. Could I telephone then? No, that was far too early—I forced myself to wait till seven-thirty. Then there was no answer. The instrument was dead.

I decided to dress and go downstairs. Dressing took time. I combed my fluff of hair into decorum and put on a subdued lipstick. Then, just as I was ready to leave, came a knock at my door and the breakfast tray.

I asked my maid what rooms she looked after. "Why yours, miss, and the next when it is occupied."

"Then you aren't very busy now?" I suggested.

"I assist with the linen. The mending, I mean," she explained.

Mending and the third-floor rooms—and mine was the only one occupied on the third floor. No use going into the questions about the handkerchief, now, though I decided to ask Mitchell to see that the question was asked at the inquest of every one. I hurried through my breakfast to get downstairs.

I took the staircase to the left. One flight down I saw Anson standing in talk with the maid who did my room, and I quickened my steps toward her.

Her arms were filled with fresh towels and the feminine in me could not resist paying attention to those towels, they were so lovely.

Anson's pretty face was troubled as she turned it to me. I said, "Oh, Anson, there's something I want to ask you," and the other maid slipped away.

Anson said, "Just a minute please. I'll be right out," and turned into the door of Prince Rancini, with a quick, preliminary knock.

I didn't want to stand there waiting so I walked on down the hall, past the closed door where Nora Harriett was lying, then turned and sauntered slowly along.

Ahead of me I saw Anson come hurriedly out of Rancini's door her hands to her disordered hair, and behind her the prince made a Jack-in-the-Box appearance, popping back as he caught sight of me but not before I had glimpsed his flashing, amused smile.

Anson was breathing quickly. "Those foreigners!" she threw out, tucking in the loosened edges of her starched white frill. "He can keep his hands off!" she added, resentment stirring her out of her reticence.

"Why don't you complain to the princess?" I suggested wickedly.

That startled Anson more than Rancini had done. She looked at me out of shocked eyes. "Oh, the maid is always wrong," she said with cynical succinctness. "If you'll excuse me, miss, I'll be going back for my towels," and she cast a look, troubled for all her recovered composure, at the closed door of the room.

"Just a moment, Anson. I was waiting to see you. I want to ask you something."

She kept her face away from me. "I'll be telling all I know at the inquest this morning."

"I know, but I want to speak to you first. You know you said to the inspector that you could not say that Mr. Deck had been in Mrs. Harriett's room—when you saw him in the hall—you remember you said that, don't you?"

"I remember," she said almost reluctantly. "I didn't like to say anything else and make the gentleman trouble—I didn't know what words he had been using to the poor lady then."

Her voice changed to such sternness that I said quickly, "But perhaps Elkins didn't understand—"

"He's not one to misunderstand," she told me firmly. "I'm promised to Elkins, so I might say I know him. He didn't like to say what he had to say, but it was his duty. A man making such threats—"

All sympathy for Deck was gone from her now. I went on anxiously, "And there's another thing. Did you happen to see a handkerchief drying on a radiator in any of the rooms last night?"

I wished I could know what that change in her face meant. Had I hit on something—or was she merely startled at the idea? Her answer seemed slow in coming and when it did it was oblique.

"Will they ask me that, miss?"

"Yes, they will ask you that. But if I could know first—"

"I'll tell everything they ask me downstairs," she said at last. "It's my duty, I know, though I'm sorry enough—any one might have washed out a handkerchief—"

I said more; I urged her eagerly but the girl was immovable. She only repeated that she would tell all she knew later.

It is quite futile to look back now and think, "Oh, if I had only done that differently, if I had only found the right word!" I see her there, in her pretty black and white, that secret knowledge which she was so reluctant to reveal in her troubled eyes, and I think that if only I had been able to induce her to share it, perhaps—

But she moved away determinedly, and I went on upstairs to my room where I wrote a note to Mitchell, asking him to have that question put about the handkerchief, and another to Deck, asking him to come to see me as soon as possible. I rang for the maid and asked her to deliver them. Then I waited, hoping desperately that each moment would bring Deck.

He didn't come. He might be testing. He might be being kept incommunicado. . . . I mustn't let myself look so worried; I must seem natural and at ease before that jury.

I was in a tense state of nerves when they finally came for me. My heart was beating sickeningly when I entered that dining-room, and for a moment the faces turned to me seemed like blurs in a fog. Then I steadied, and took in the groups. I saw a knot of people writing away busily on little pads, newspaper people, I supposed, and I saw Mitchell and Donahy. The left his horse there and hired an six men of the jury were lined along other one, hitched to a sleigh. In the dazzling black table and the cor the midst of a dark, dismal forest, mustache, was at the end, and a court saw a huge timber wolf pursuing vacant chair for the witness, across the jury.

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Escape in Siberia

SIR HORACE PLUNKETT of England, or "Hod" Plunkett as the cowboys in western Nebraska and eastern Wyoming in the early days knew him, had some thrilling adventures on the American frontier, but his narrowest escape from death was in Siberia.

One day his horse went lame and he asked her to deliver them. Then I waited, hoping desperately that each moment would bring Deck.

He didn't come. He might be testing. He might be being kept incommunicado. . . . I mustn't let myself look so worried; I must seem natural and at ease before that jury.

I was in a tense state of nerves when they finally came for me. My heart was beating sickeningly when I entered that dining-room, and for a moment the faces turned to me seemed like blurs in a fog. Then I steadied, and took in the groups. I saw a knot of people writing away busily on little pads, newspaper people, I supposed, and I saw Mitchell and Donahy. The left his horse there and hired an six men of the jury were lined along other one, hitched to a sleigh. In the dazzling black table and the cor the midst of a dark, dismal forest, mustache, was at the end, and a court saw a huge timber wolf pursuing vacant chair for the witness, across the jury.

Household Questions

Cut out old canes in raspberry bushes when they are through bearing fruit. These canes will never bear fruit again.

Cloths saturated with polishing liquids if stored away in a closet often cause spontaneous combustion. Keep these cloths in a covered tin container.

Lingerie must be tinted occasionally to preserve its dainty appearance. A faded blue garment will tint a delicate orchid with the aid of a pink dye, a pale yellow will shade into a delicate green if dipped in blue dye and a pink dye will change the yellow to a shell pink. Be sure to use small quantities of the dye for these pastel shades.

Oil or oily substances should never be used on waxed floors. They soften the wax, sink into wood and eventually darken it.

A pinch of baking soda added to the water in which a fowl is cooked will make it more tender.

A cup of peanut butter mixed with half a cup of mayonnaise and one finely chopped raw onion makes a good sandwich spread.

When making pastry use only enough water to hold ingredients together. Mix quickly, roll and handle as little as possible if you wish pastry to be flaky.

AMERICANA

Ellsworth Floyd Whalen

Public school superintendents and college professors often discuss the need of a more liberal theme of thought in our American educational system. This so called "liberal theme of thought" is based on beliefs that no person should ever have to take an oath to uphold his office, that capitalism is undermining the morale of the nation, and that the United States Constitution is nothing more than a document to be changed at will for biased political power. People who voice opposition to such liberal ideals as advocated by this specific group of educators, are often termed narrow-minded and ultra-conservative in their outlook on life. Students who are subject to such education, rush out into the business world ready to reform capitalism, religion, and the government. After a few months of "reforming," the young subject of "liberal education" usually settles down and becomes a wage earner with the conviction that he would rather turn his energy into channels of earning financial capital rather than saving up liberal idealism.

What our American educational system really needs, is the type of educator who can combine idealism and practical education into one unit so they can work together for the mutual advantage of the student's mind on his future outlook on life.

A great part of American social, political, and economic life is studied in community clubs throughout the nation. All communities, whether large or small, should have some study clubs where men and women can meet and discuss current events as they originate in daily life. Too few of our citizens concern themselves with vital problems of the day as they affect our social and economic life. Perhaps the finest examples of American study clubs are to be found in the Kiwanis, Rotarian, National Business and Professional Women's clubs, University Women's clubs, and other organizations that work towards a definite goal of success. A goal that often includes the enrichment of poor children's welfare and material construction in the community for the common benefit of all, such as the construction of recreation centers. These community clubs are an essential factor in promoting the community's growth of which they represent and they are typically American both in origin and spirit.

One of the great problems Americans must solve in the future, is whether or not we want to keep the class system that we have created within our United States. Many Americans will tell you that there is no class system in the United States, that we are all one people in thought, word, and manner. If such were the case, we would be the strongest nationalistic nation in the world. However, such is not the case and definitely so.

The greatest class system in the United States naturally exists in the Southern States, where if you told a white man he was no better than a negro, the chances for your physical safety would certainly be imperiled. The time is not far off when as American citizens we must make important decisions regarding old age pensions that colored citizens of our nation would be entitled to receive under protest from the whites in the Southern States. If you vote in a blanket old age pension for all Americans to receive, watch how it affects the class feeling in the South.

Within the next two or three years, the United States may start the construction of more dirigibles. Unlike Germany, our success with the rigid type of airship has been very limited. The Akron and Macon, while representing the last word in dirigible construction, could probably have been much better built, especially in the riveting phase of the work. The United States Navy is watching Germany's new airship Hindenburg very closely in order to determine whether or not dirigible travel is safe, sound, and practical. The real answer to the latter statement could easily be found however, in the excellent performance of the world-famous Graf Zeppelin which is still in service. The only dirigible that the United States Navy has now, is the old Los Angeles, and even that successful airship was built by Germany.

If Germany can successfully build and fly rigid dirigibles, certainly the United States can also, but only the future can prove this to be so, as public opinion at the present time is definitely against the construction of Naval airships.
